HIGHLIGHTS

The University of North Texas (UNT) basketball team locker room needed a facelift. It was old and outdated, with wood paneling, worn out lockers, and brick walls with bright, green paint. The school calls itself the “Mean Green Nation” – but the locker room took it too far.

“Some organizations like to show off their locker rooms, but we used to hide ours because it looked like a bunker,” laughs Luke Della, UNT’s Sports Information Director. “We were all in agreement that we needed a serious upgrade.”

They knew they wanted the best, most durable, and smartest solution on the market, so they called Wenger Corporation. The company’s GearBoss brand is known among athletic programs in high schools, colleges, and professional sports teams across the country. It was the perfect solution for UNT to create a modern, high-tech, and highly functional space for the student athletes to gather, gear up for the game, and wind down after.

“The locker room should be your home,” says Della. “It should be a place you’re proud of that represents the team, the program, and anyone using it.”

Form and Function

The old locker room was demolished to make way for the new.

“With our new space, we wanted top of the line lockers that gave our guys a space of their own,” says Andrew Hudiberg, Director of Scouting at UNT. “We needed the essentials: LED lighting, acrylic surfaces, wall-wraps, name plates, and televisions.”

This wasn’t the school’s first locker room renovation. They had also turned to GearBoss for track and soccer locker rooms earlier in the year, so they knew they were getting high quality products.

GearBoss crews installed 18 new lockers with custom-engraved backlit acrylic side panels, a flip-up TV monitor with USB inputs, and magnetic back panels to interchange graphics as needed. Each locker includes secure storage for valuables and a door that slides out and closes, making clean up quick and easy.

Locker highlights include:

- Custom-engraved backlit acrylic side panels
- Flip-up TV monitor with USB inputs
- Magnetic back panels for easily interchangeable graphics
- GearBoss exclusive heavy-duty coat hooks
- Graphite antimicrobial laminate finish
- GearBoss exclusive powder-coated, perforated, breathable base
- Digital locking storage compartment

“This is an old building with radiused walls and both concave and convex curves, so we needed to engage our engineers more than we normally would,” says Gary Schlatholt, Wenger National Sales Manager for GearBoss products. “UNT staff was really happy with our customized solution. It keeps the athletes organized and maximizes the space.”

The final touch was adding GearBoss storage carts to keep balls and other equipment organized and at the ready.

The Big Reveal

The difference between the old and new locker room is night and day.

“This locker room really sets them apart,” Schlatholt says. “It can make the difference if an athlete is considering two different schools.”

“The new locker room is fantastic and the students absolutely love it,” Della says. “It was Christmas in July when we revealed it. This is a place where the boys want to be, and they love that there’s been an investment into their space. They’re proud of it and so are we.”
